Field of the Invention The present invention is directed to the area of digital radio frequency oscillators which are used as local oscillators in radio receivers, such as solid state digital radio frequency receivers. The present invention is more specifically directed to digital radio frequency oscillators that provide frequency stability suitable for digitally synthesized radio frequency (RF) receivers. 2. Description of the Related Art Digital radio frequency (RF) oscillators have been integrated in a variety of circuits, such as integrated transceivers, radios, and other similar circuits. Integrated circuits are advantageous over comparable mechanical devices in that they are smaller, consume less power, and usually operate at higher frequencies. However, a typical digital RF oscillator generates a frequency that has a modulation index of about 70 percent or more, which results in a phase noise at the intermediate frequency (IF) stage that is much greater than the phase noise of comparable analog oscillators. In addition, some of the drawbacks associated with an integrated oscillator are that the magnitude of the oscillating frequency is determined by the value of a crystal resonator, and this value can vary. This variation can be caused by process variations and temperature variations. Conventional digital RF oscillators utilize a digital phase locked loop (DPLL) as a frequency synthesizer for tuning the output signal. This DPLL is used to synthesize

Kevin De Bruyne is currently playing for Belgium at the World Cup but Pep Guardiola has been monitoring the 21-year-old's performances during his time at City and would like him to become a central member of the new project he has planned at the Etihad Stadium. "He is a special player," the City manager said of De Bruyne. "He is a natural genius. The only way to explain him is him playing football. He is in a certain way, he is unique. He is one of the best players I have ever seen. "I am not saying I want him in the team. He is in the team. If I didn't think that it is important, I wouldn't have spoken about it. I wanted to speak because I am a strong admirer of players like him. It is important to have some talent, players like him. I spoke about him and I think he is important." Guardiola made clear that the intention is that De Bruyne would be the first name on his long-term wish list of potential additions to City's coaching staff. "We are working together on it," the manager said. "We are working on that with him. What I'm working on, and I speak with him all the time about that, is the best way to combine the three best ideas: the manager, the coach, the player. That is my biggest challenge. That is the only way we are going to improve. "What is Kevin? He is a genius, a genius in football. What do I mean? He is a footballer at the highest level and when you see him play you can see it. He is a unique player. He is not a striker. He has amazing movement and amazing footwork. He is a technical player, he can do e79caf774b
