Read MoreQ: OOP Unit Testing Class with Class Builder How do you unit test this class? I tried mocking the methods, but Mockito wasn't able to create the project. public class ClassBuilder { / * @param string * @return string */ public String makeString(final String string) { return string.substring(0, Math.min(string.length(), 3)) + "..."; } / * @param stringBuilder * @return stringBuilder */ public StringBuilder makeStringBuilder(final StringBuilder stringBuilder) { return new StringBuilder(makeString(stringBuilder.toString())); } } For this I created a unit test project, imported the ClassBuilder and mocked StringBuilder, to make sure that the methods create a StringBuilder, but I cannot make sure that I am actually returning the correct StringBuilder. I am not sure how to test the methods in this class and I am fairly new to Java. I have previously used Mockito, but this has been abandoned. Testcase 1: @Test

The placental uptake of L-aromatic amino acids was studied in vitro in explants of chorionic villi and decidua obtained from placentae of normal pregnancy and preeclampsia. In the villous explant, 3H-leucine and -phenylalanine were taken up at 4 degrees C by a system sensitive to an Na+ gradient. In the presence of furosemide, L-leucine uptake was stimulated by an Na+ gradient. In the decidua, L-aminoisobutyric acid was taken up at 4 degrees C by a system highly sensitive to the presence of an Na+ gradient, and by an Na+ independent system. In both the villous and decidua, L-proline, L-leucine and L-phenylalanine uptake was significantly increased after 1 min of preincubation with 4-aminopyrazolo[3,4-d]pyrimidine (4-AP). For both the villous and decidua, the uptake of L-leucine was similar after preincubation for 1 and 5 min with 4-AP. For proline, however, uptake after 1 min of preincubation was markedly greater in the decidua than in the villous explants, while after 5 min preincubation the level of uptake was
